CHAPTER I
INTRODUCTION

A. Background of Study

Human uses language to communicate with others. Basically humans are social creatures, so they cannot live alone, they need to help each others. They use language to communicate and socialize with the community. Language are used to convey ideas and opinion, people also can share their experiences or their feelings. According to Atkinson states that language is best understood in the context of communication, communication being a natural and genetically determined function of the human being (Atkinson, Kilby & Roca, 1982: 21). They can communicate with language by spoken or written. One of those languages is English.

English is one of language that is very important in this world, because it becomes an International language and as a global language which is learned by countries in this world. All of people wants to be able speak English, even in any word.

Word is the smallest meaningful unit of language (Atkinson, Kilby & Roca, 1982: 127). In linguistics, the study to discuss about the process of words is called morphology. Morphology is the study of the forms of words, and the ways in
